Introduction

Dear Colleagues,

Pediatric endoscopic surgery is increasingly becoming the basic form of surgical treatment for children worldwide. In our country and the whole region, it is still at the very beginning, because of rather demanding and expensive technology that involves its application and also, the need for multiple and special training for pediatric surgeons, necessary for such surgical procedures to be safely and knowingly undertaken.

Particularly sensitive areas of endoscopic surgery are neonatal laparoscopy and thoracoscopy, since their application in the youngest age is especially demanding, very delicate and more risky due to limited intraoperative space and the possibility of frequent complications.

Hence, the need for the advanced training and superior skillfulness of neonatal surgeons is imperative to perform such procedures. Mastering this kind of vision, hands-on training, step by step, with the use of adequate instrumentation, is a prerequisite for the implementation of laparoscopic and thoracoscopic procedures in vivo. This method of comprehensive organization of the Neonatal Laparoscopic and Thoracoscopic Surgical Masterclass is suitable not only for beginners, but it is also recommended for the experts in the art.

The Course Director, lecturer and simulating instructor is Professor Amulya Saxena, from Imperial College London, announcing President of the European Association of Pediatric Surgeons, who has great experience in conducting such and similar practical and demonstrational courses around the world, especially in developing countries and in southeastern Europe, where young doctors do not have so many opportunities to follow current courses in this field and be educated in this way. Professor Saxena accepted the role of benefactor, brought the world to them and trained many young pediatric surgeons to be able to independently and safely deal with pediatric endoscopic surgery.

Currently, training in neonatal endoscopic surgery is imperative, a challenge of much greater importance than basic procedures and with a tendency to develop and refine laparoscopic and thoracoscopic surgery in our country and the whole region, from where, interested participants are expected.

Hope that you will find the participating in this Masterclass and your stay in Belgrade, both valuable and enjoyable, so the experiences from this event will be engraved in your memory and become traditional.

Have a great educational time and also, taste and enjoy Belgrade...
